President's Message

As we mark the Palmer Lake Historical Society's 64th year, I am excited to share with you the publication of the new edition of Marion Savage Sabin's book, Palmer Lake: A Historical Narrative as well as the near completion of the update of our website. I am grateful to our members and volunteers who supported these efforts.

In addition to our monthly history programs, the Lucretia Vaile Museum will open two new exhibits this year: Wayne Russert's "The History of Radio and its Pioneers" and a celebration of the 100th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment which gave women the right to vote, "The Women's Suffrage Movement". Both are under the direction of museum director/curator Rogers Davis and will include many unusual historical displays. Be sure to plan a visit.

At the January annual membership meeting, the following 2020 Palmer Lake Historical Society Board of Directors Officers were elected: Su Ketchmark, president, Wayne Russert, vice president, Patricia Atkins, secretary, and Maggie Williamson, treasurer. Rogers Davis continues as the Lucretia Vaile Museum director. At large board members are Susan Kuehster, Pat McCarthy, Barbara Morehead, and Sharon Williams.

If you are not a member of the PLHS, please consider joining us. Both the Society and the Lucretia Vaile Museum operate exclusively through membership dues, donations, and the efforts of volunteers. We have a variety of jobs for willing hands. For more information, call 719-559-0837 or email PLHS@PalmerDivideHistory.org.

All PLHS programs and events are free and open to the public. Refreshments and time for fellowship follow the program. We hope you will participate as often as you can.

Su Ketchmark, PLHS President

"Walking Tours of the Former Monument Tree Farm"

Tour Guide: Eric Swab

After an unsuccessful tree nursery attempt on Pikes Peak, the Monument Nursery (located just west of the town of Monument) ended up successfully producing over 72,000,000 tree seedlings between 1906 and 1964. It was one of the first in the forest system and the most important in the Rocky Mountains.

Eric Swab has presented programs on the Forest Service's Monument Tree Nursery and has also written about the subject. In May of 2016, he led the first Palmer Lake Historical Society tour of the former tree nursery and is back by popular demand.

Today the bicycle is mainly known as a recreational vehicle and is enjoyed by people in every corner of the world. But at its outset, this “controversial” machine caused inroads into society that revolutionized politics, fashion, and social policy as well as paving the way for the mechanized world of motion to come. Victorian Cycles, Wheels of Change (Documentary copyright, Jim Kellett 2004) is a fascinating documentary about the bicycle’s coming of age and its tremendous impact on society. It is filled with images of a by-gone era, and the people who embraced its change.

The first bicycle craze swept Colorado and the nation more than a century ago. By the 1880s, thousands of Coloradans, women as well as men, pedaled around the state’s cities and towns and sometimes ventured out onto country roads. These early cyclists established clubs such as the Denver Ramblers, the Colorado Wheel Club, and the Social Wheel Club. The wheel clubs crusaded for building bicycle paths through urban areas and out into rural areas. For example, in 1897, a club headed by Gov. Alva Adams and some prominent businessmen built a 50-mile path between Denver and Palmer Lake.

There is a story about a young woman who tried to ride her bicycle the 50 or so miles from Denver to Palmer Lake - in one day. When darkness fell and she could no longer see the bicycle path, she knocked on the door of a ranch house and was invited to spend the night. She continued on the next day.

The Old Territorial Road Mountain Bike Trail (right) is rated as “easy.” The gravel path connects Palmer Lake to Greenland and follows the route of the Old Territorial Road, paralleling the railroad tracks. The Greenland Trail splits off from Old Territorial Road approximately 4 miles north of Palmer Lake.
